On NATO Spending Carlucci: Europe Should Pay 'Fair Share'

MUNICH - In what Pentagon officials called a significant hard-ening of the U.S. stance toward NATO allies, Frank Carlucci, the U.S. deputy secretary of defense, has warned that the United States cannot be expected to enhance its military effort in Europe or other areas uniess the ailies contribute their "fair share" of the burden.

Mr. Carlucci, speaking to an in-ternational meeting of Western military specialists Saturday, said Europe's economic output now exceeds that of the United States. He also accused the Soviet Union of developing its muitary forces be-youd defense needs and claimed that it is building an offensive potential directed at Mideast oilfields

U.S. Warns Allies

To promote a "mature alliance," Mr. Carlucci called on the allies to embrace an "expanded concept of European security" that would have them build up their military and political ramparts well beyond Europe, particularly in the strate-gic Gulf area.

Mr. Carlucci's remarks came at the 18th annual Wehrkunde Conference, organized by a private West German group that seeks to promote public awareness of military policies.

In recent years, Washington has heen pressuring the NATO allies to play a greater role in Western military preparedness. But Saturday's speech appeared to be the most pointed public statement yet, and clearly designed to compel the allies to match the military buildup President Reagan is asking of Congress in his budget.

In contrast, West German Defense Minister Hans Apel put equal stress on achieving an East-West military balance with pursuing cooperative relations with the Soviet Union, especially through

"We shall continue to pursue the policy of detente with patience when things seem to stagnate, and we shall do so with a proper sense of proportion for what is feasible,"

"On the arms export issue, the government is walking through a political and diplomatic mine-field ... and right now the Saudis are doing a rather good job of exploiting the situation, said a senior Western diplomat.

The soaring costs of weapons projects, particularly the Torna-do, are already a major political issue in West Germany. Currently, the government lacks 1.3 bil-lion marks ($600 million) to cover production and related expenses of Germany's 42.5 percent share in the project, which has triggered a major controver-

The Europeans should recognize that the defense of the West means more than the defense of Europe in Europe. The Americans should understand that an efficient leadership with their European partners accomplishes more than strong admonitions."

Mr. Luns criticized the idea that "there is no alternative to detente" with the Soviet Union. He said unilateral disarmament was "dangerous, since it overlooks the possibility that the Kremlin, at the right chance, would be all too happy to decide in favor of domination as an alternative to detente."

Mr. Carlucci, in a sharp reference to the failure of the allies to meet a U.S. goal of increasing military spending by 3 percent beyond inflation, said that he sees a "criti-

According to European aerospace industry sources, the Saudis are interested in buying at least 70 Tornados, but they also have indi-cated intenst in as many as 100 and an unconfirmed report from United Press International Saturday cited a figure of 200.

"Such a sale [of the Tornado] is definitely a possiblity and from an industrial point of view, it is no problem," said Gero Madelung, president of Messershmitt-Boel-kow-Blohm (MBB), which is prime contractor for 324 West German planes being built by the Panavia consortium out of a total 805 Tornados planned during the program running through 1985.

"But obviously, all exports outside of NATO are a highly politi-cal affair and the permission to act must come from Bonn," he said during an interview last week at MBB's headquarters near Munich.

Mr. Madelung added that MBB and its partners in Panavia — Brit-ish Aerospace and Italy's Aeritalia are holding to their previously planned Tornado production runs and that government payments are continuing, despite the budget COULTONEISY.

The so-called fly-away price of each plane, excluding spare parts and other extras, totals around 35 million marks ($17 million). The systems price, including the extras, is presently around 67 million marks

Meantime, the Saudis also are apparently trying to enhance West German interest in the possible sale of the Leopard tanks. According to West German industry sources, the Saudis have expressed interest in buying 300 of the tanks, which cost around $1.5 million each: 1,800 treaded military vehicles: and antitank missile systems, completed last week from firsthand reports from Central America. asserted that the guerrillas would most likely become stronger by April, when fresh shipments of arms are scheduled for completion. Officials in Washington said the supplies - from Vietnam.

Ethiopia, Bulgaria, Hungary and East Germany — were shipped by sea through Cuba, flowing into Nicaragua and Honduras en route to El Salvador. Most of the weapons. ammunition, communications equipment and medical supplies were bought or captured from Western nations, the officials said.

The military assessment prepared in the Defense Department numbered 17.000 men, including administrative and support per-sonnel, compared with 3,700 fulltime and 5,000 part-time guerrillas.
With a combat ratio of about 4-to-I, the analysis said, it would be impossible for the government forces to terminate the insurgency. Military experts have held that a conventional army and police force must outnumber a guerrilla force by a 10-1 ratio because the guerrillas have the advantage of knowing where, when and how

Former Member of Junta Is Arrested in El Salvador

The Associated Press

SAN SALVADOR — President Jose Napoleon Duarte has announced the arrest of a former junta member who was the most liberal voice in El Salvador's government until his removal.

Mr. Duarte also said Saturday that his country needed economic assistance from the United States more than military aid and could do without U.S. arms if alleged weapons shipments to guerrillas through Nicaragua were cut off. Mr. Duarte said Col. Adolfo

U.S. Study Calls Aid To Junta a 'Mistake'

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. support for El Salvador's junta is:
"a diplomatic mistake and a misreading of Salvadoran history" that could contribute to defeat of the democratic cause there, according to a report prepared for the State Department.

The 132-page document does not mention Soviet or Cuban involvement in El Salvador, Rather, it traces the roots of the civil conflict to more than a century of economic inequality and generations of repressive rule.

The draft version of the study. written two months ago by three University of North Carolina pro-fessors under contract to the State Department, was obtained by The Associated Press.

In an interview, one of the authors, Enrique A. Baloyra, agreed that leftist nations had supplied arms to the guerrillas, but he said claims of strong Cuban influence over the insurgency were "counter to the facts."

The report was criticized by some government officials, who asked not to be named. They said there were disagreements over the report's view of external involvement and of what constitutes a le-

The committee, with Midge Decter, the writer, as executive di-rector, has set up a headquarters in New York and another office in London. Its members are promi-nent writers, publishers, academic figures, scientists and labor leaders from a dozen countries, including Britain, Canada, Australia, France

"Our aim is to alter the climate of confusion and complacency, apathy and self-derigration, that has done so much to weaken the Western democracies in the face of a growing threat to their continued viability and even their existence as free societies," the committee said in a policy statement signed by the members. It ended with a mmitment to defend the non-Communist world "against the ris-ing menace of totalitarianism."

Norman Podhoretz, is editor of Commentary, said the idea for the committee emerged almost two years ago after she and others artended a meeting in Jerusalem on international terrorism. She said she came away convinced of the need for action against those who kidnap and throw bombs, many of whom are trained in the Soviet Union and Cuba, but also concerned about 2 spreading practice of indulging in self-criticism to the point of condoning terrorism as being justified. Initial financial support of $125,000 was provided by individual contributors and foundations such as Pittsburgh's Scaife Foundation, the John M. Olin Foundation of Missouri and the Smith Richardson Foundation of North Carolina, which have a reputation for supporting conservative causes.

Reached in London, he said that although he had many good friends on the committee, he regarded it as strange that people who represented the trend of the times — meaning the political swing to center-right — and had access to positions of power seemed "so defensive."

By contrast, an enthusiastic endorsement of the committee was expressed by Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, the chief U.S. delegate to the United Nations, who said she was compelled to suspend her membership because of her new post.

AFL-CIO Chiefs Cast About for Answers As Influence Slips With Rank-and-File

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. - When President Reagan suggested last week that labor leaders were "out of step" with their own rank and file in last year's election and in their opposition to his administration's economic program, union chiefs gathered here indignantly rejected the notion.

Lane Kirkland, the president of the AFL-CIO, firmly responded that the trade union movement was more democratic than the Reagan administration had so far demonstrated itself to be in creating its economic policy.

The union leaders at the federation's executive council meeting here have indeed been engaged in some intense soul-searching about the decline of their political fortunes and influence. But so far they have been finding that the fault lies in their stars, in former President Jimmy Carter, in the Democratic Party — anyplace, in fact, but in themselves. The one answer that the union presidents and the labor federation's staff have come up with to regain their political power is that

Settlement Set On 3 Mile Island Accident Claims New York Times Service

HARRISBURG, Pa. — Nearly two years after the Three Mile Island reactor was partly melted in the worst commercial nuclear accident dent ever, the facility's owners and builders have tentatively reached a $25-million settlement with thou-sands of claimants who live within a 25-mile (40-kilometer) radius of

Most of the money will pay for business losses incurred in an evacnation of the area. The negotiated terms of the settlement leave open the possibility of other damage claims by individuals for personal injury and by local governments for added costs for police and other services. The settlement, which would be paid by two consortiums of insurpaid by two consortiums of insur-ance companies — American Nu-clear Insurers and Mutual Atomic Energy Liability Underwriters, was tentatively approved late Pri-day by Federal District Judge Sylvia Rambo.

real defection took place among the rank and file at the polls last November. Mr. Kirkland challenged the results of a New York Times-CBS News poll taken of voters emerging from balloting places last year. The poll indicated that 44 percent of union members and their families voted for Mr. Reagan. Mr. Kirkland said that polls taken by the labor federation in selected wards with a high percentage of union voters showed that 58 percent of union members

Some union lenders here concede that an unusually large proportion of their members trayed from traditional voting habits to vote for Mr. Reagan and other conservatives. They tend to blame what they regard as a weak candidacy by Mr. Carter, resulting from his handling of the hostage situation and the nation's economic policy.

William W. Winpisinger, president of the International Associa-tion of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, one of the few unions not to endorse Mr. Carter last year, said that "to the extent that our people voted for Reagan, it was an anti-Carter vote."
Albert Shanker, the president of the American Federation of Teachers, said that while his union voted by a 2 to 1 ratio for Mr. Carter, it did so because of the single issue of tuition tax credits, which Mr. Reagan had endorsed and the union had rejected.

Several union leaders said that their members were supporting Mr. Reagan's economic and social policies only because they do not realize their consequences.

"Our people say 'yes' to ending big government and to big budget cuts," said William Wynn, president of the United Food and Commercial Workers Union, one of the mercial workers Union, one of the biggest affiliates of the labor federation. Union leaders here have been talking about the need for improved communications with rankand-file workers. There are also signs of new interest in active campaigns to attract new members to the union movement, whose percentage of the total work force has been declining in recent years.

However, the union leaders do not appear to connect these needs with their declining political influ-ence. Instead, the union leaders are greatly concerned about the "image" of the trade union movement. And yet, if the unions did sub-

Greece Protests To U.S. About

THENS — The Greek government has protested to the U.S. ambassador about an unauthorized military exercise carried out in northern Greece last week.

Foreign Minister Constantine
Mitsotakis Saturday summoned
Ambassador Robert McCloskey to his office where the strongly worded protest was delivered, despite an apology and full explanation of the incident issued Friday by U.S. authorities.

The exercise, part of a regular training program, was carried out by a detachment of 20 U.S. Army personnel on Feb. 19 in the northern city of Drama. The group marched along public highways into the town center wearing gas masks and protective clothing designed for use in cases where chemical agents might be employed.

A statement by the U.S. Embassy Friday said that the march, outside the normal training area, had been unauthorized, and that the Greek authorities had been offered full explanations and apologies, while those responsible had been reprimanded.

Japan Faces Decade With Quiet Confidence

By Henry Scott Stokes New York Times Service

TOKYO - Japan is facing the 1980s in a mood of self-confidence that is different from the sometimes cocky and abrasive attitude that resulted from the spectacular growth of its economy in the preceding decades.

The new attitude is reflected in views about foreign policy and de-fense. In the early 1970s the yen emerged as a strong currency and there was talk among right-wingers in the ruling Liberal Democratic Party of acquiring nuclear weapons and building up large conventional forces. But the oil crisis of 1973 coupled with runaway inflation undermined optimism here, creating a panic among consumers and halting talk of Japan's new world role.

Eight years after that shock, however, the yen is perhaps the world's strongest currency and the Japanese were able to absorb the oil price rises of 1979 and 1980. Confidence is again strong and this is coupled with the sober realization that Japan has international responsibilities.

British Officials Protest Verbal Attacks By Members of Singapore Government

SINGAPORE — The British High Commission, stung by the scorn that seems to be directed permanently at London by Singapore, has complained about it to the ruling political party here.

The British are tired of hearing their system being cited in Singa-pore as a recipe for failure, and their country being compared un-favorably with Japan and West Сегшапу.

British diplomats are dismayed that government leaders from Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew on down see fit to use almost any public occasion to make disparagproblems as an example of an undisciplined, self-destructive and class-ridden society.

Diplomatic sources said that the protest was contained in a letter to the People's Action Party after a scathing attack by a trade union leader during last December's general election campaign.

Incongruent Views

The contents of the letter were not disclosed, but the sources said that it reflected deep concern over the harmful long-term effect of what they saw as a never-ending denigration of Britain by Singaporean leaders.

The camion in Japan may be frustrating to the Reagan administration, which may prefer visible military support from the main U.S. ally in the Far East Japanese policy makers, notably at the For-eign Ministry, have therefore strived since the mid-1970s to find a rationale for supporting U.S. global aims by means other than

The rationale - the comprehensive security policy — seems to be widely accepted in Japanese politics and the bureaucracy. Japan will give emergency economic aid, sometimes at very short notice, to embattled nations — with the ex-ception of Israel. Aid will be donbled in the first half of the 1980s to well over $20 billion.

The premise of this policy is that Japan will prosper only in a world at peace. Protection of oil and food-supply routes cannot be as-sured by building an armada of ships or by introducing nuclear weapons, Liberal Democrat officials say.

Japan has generally been silent on foreign-policy issues since the end of World War II. "The truth is, we have no foreign policy," a leading diplomat said in an inter-view in early 1979.

But Japan has recently expressed definite views on foreignpolicy issues. Cambodia is an example. Last month the chief Cabinet secretary, Kiichi Miyazawa, Mr. Suzuki's right-hand man, warned that continued support for Pol Pot as leader of Cambodia was mistaken.

The Japanese have been cautious in their support of the Chun Doo Hwan regime in South Korea and Mr. Suzuki will not attend Mr. Chun's inauguration in Seoul as president in March, officials said. The Japanese policy may disap-point the United States, which has enthusiastically supported Mr. Chun. But at other times the Japanese have strongly supported U.S. aims, such as in Indochina when Japan cut off economic aid in early 1979 to Vietnam after the Vietnamese invaded Cambodia. For Japan the alliance with the United States is the cornerstone of foreign policy, and relations between the two powers were never better, officials on both sides say.

But behind this stance is the fact that Japan is increasingly independent and quietly conscious of its weight in affairs, as was shown when Mr. Suzuki became the first premier since the end of World War II not to make his first over-

Pope, in Guam, Exhorts Small Crowd To Remain Strong, Not to Distort Faith

By Jack R. Payron United Press International

AGANA, Guam - Pope John Paul II arrived in Guam on Sunday and called on the people of the U.S. protectorate to remain strong in their Christian faith.

The pope's welcome to the mid-Pacific island was one of the more subdued in his papacy, in contrast with his six-day trip to the Philip-pines, where the government sought every chance to associate itself with the outpouring of enthusiasm he met.

The 18-hour Guam tour marks the halfway point in the pope's 12day swing through Asia, begun with a short stopover in Karachi. Pakistan. He heads for Japan on Monday.

About 2,000 people, one-tenth of the expected turnout, greeted the pope when he arrived at Agana sirport. Present at welcoming ceremonies were local government and church officials. U.S. ambassador to Japan Mike Mansfield, and Cardinal Pio Taofinu'u of Western Samoa, representing Roman Catholics of the South Pacific.

Subdued Welcome

The several thousand residents who lined the five-mile motorcade route from the airport to the Sweet Name of Mary cathedral cheered only briefly as the pope passed by, and many others in restaurants and cafes along the way continued eating. In a short address at the cathedral, John Paul said, "May you give zealous witness to true moral values in the midst of a world that is often confused and misled. For over three centuries, the church has offered the most treasured gift of faith to the people of Guarn."

The pope urged the people of Guam and South Pacific nations to share their faith, saying, "The church is an instrument of evangelization, imparting Christ's message in its entirety with the rich fullness of its content.

But he indirectly warned the islanders against distorting church ritual to suit their unique cultures.

New York Times Service DAVAO. Philippines - This large, raw settler city, which likes to compare itself to towns of the early American West, exemplifies the essence of political life in the Philippines, often covering deadly serious problems with an overlay of bravado and comic opera.

With a population officially listed at 611.000 but estimated at closer to 1 million, Davao, in the central part of the southern island of Mindanao, is the second- or thirdlargest city in the country, depending on how the population of Cebu is counted. Although it has an area of 1,100 square miles, it is hardly a city at all.

There is a lot of jungle within the city limits. Mayor Luis T. Santos said. There are also a lot of monkey-eating eagles; indeed, the city is the sole habitat of the large birds of prey. Friday, when Pope John Paul II visited Davao, the official city newspaper, which was distributed among the pope's entourage and featured portraits of the pope and Mr. Santos on its front page, had been sabotaged. Under the mayor's picture was the typed-in caption, "an impostor."

Mr. Lopez, however, is also close to the president's party, and Mr. Marcos' local friends, with the president's cooperation, are working out a Solomonic compromise, resolving in one maneuver the elec-tion deadlock and the problem of Davao's unwieldy dimensions.

Mr. Santos disclosed, and Mr. Marcos' kingmaker in Mindanao, Antonio O. Floirendo, confirmed, that a plan was afoot to split Davao into two cities, providing em-ployment for both men with a claim to the mayoralty. Imelda City

"Davao will be divided within the year," Mayor Santos said; Mr. Floirendo said the issue would be put to a plebiscite.

Vietnamese Priests Report Pressure Against Catholics

Los Angeles Times Service
LAEM SING, Thailand — Apparently wary over the powerful role that the Roman Catholic Church has played in the recent unrest in Poland, Vietnamese Communists have tightened sanctions on the church in southern Vietnam, according to two Catholic priests who recently arrived at the refugee camp here.

The two priests, one of whom asked to remain anonymous for fear of reprisals against his family, said that Communist officials acknowledged that a renewed cam-paign against the church is linked to events in Poland.

About 100 of the approximately 500 refugees in this camp on the Gulf of Thailand are Catholics.
The priests said the Communists The priests said the Communists look upon the church as a potentially "destabilizing" element. But there was no indication that the regime regards the church as an immediate challenge to its power. Although a minority, Vietnamese Catholics exercised influence out of all proportion to their numbers. of all proportion to their numbers before the Communist takeover of the South in 1975. This was especially true during the regime of President Ngo Dinh Diem, a Catholic, who was murdered in 1963.

have been ordained since 1975 and only one seminary, in Ho Chi Minh City (formerly Saigon), is still operating.
Priests who were arrested or who have died have not been re-placed. "The Communists say there are already too many priests," said Father Phuong, who spent four years in a "re-education center" before escaping to Thai-

So far, there has been no official determination whether U.S. law was formally violated in the case, in part because of a lack of resources to investigate thoroughly what the company actually was, who formed it and what it did. In addition, some countries view the U.S. re-export restrictions as an infringement on their own sovereignty and refuse to help enforce them.
Because Col. Qadhati's air force

At the same time, they are irritated because Libya has managed to flout U.S. export law while Washington is making a principle of withholding delivery of the C-130s already purchased

Soviet Ships Sent To Maputo After S. African Raid

JOHANNESBURG - The Sovi-

Suvorov and another Soviet ship from the Indian Ocean fleet docked last week in the ports of Beira and Maputo, and Valentin Vdovin, the Soviet ambassador to Mozambique, said at a news conference Saturday in Maputo that other Soviet military ships would arrive in Mozambique's waters "in the next few days." He did not say how many ships would dock or how long they would remain.

"We are not threatening anyone," he was quoted as saying by the official Mozambique news agency, "but if anyone attacks us or our friends, we will give a suitable response."

On Jan. 30, South African commandos raided three houses in a Maputo suburb, 50 kilometers (31 miles) from the South African border, which they contended houses were headquarters of the African National Congress, a banned black nationalist group fighting the white-minority government in South Africa.

For the moment, the French president, facing a surprisingly spirited re-election struggle in which foreign policy will play an important role, is saying nothing publicly about these impressions and his ideas on breaking the impasse that detente has reached.

He retreated into diplomatic signature of the presented into diplomatic signature. He retreated into diplomatic silence when the subjects were broached for comment during a conversation in his Elysee Palace office Friday.

Response From Brezhnev

He did confirm that after receiving a response from Mr. Brezhnev, he is pushing forward with the pro-posal he made last month for an international conference on Afghanistan that conceivably could bring the United States and the Soviet Union together at a bargaining table.

Mr. Brezhnev's previously undisclosed Feb. 4 letter contained a reaffirmation of traditional Soviet positions on Afghanistan and other subjects, Mr. Giscard d'Estaing said, but did not constitute "a stead, "it cited a number of problems such a proposal raises,' ng short of a rejection, he said.

The French leader said positive responses had come from the Islamic Conference Organization, from his European partners, and from Pakistan, which had reacted with initial irritation when Mr. Giscard d'Estaing made the proposal on French television Jan. 27. The Reagan administration has endorsed the plan, which Mr. Giscard d'Estaing said on television should bring together the Soviet Union, those countries that are accused by the Russians of actively supporting the Afghan rebels, and the permanent members of the United Nations Security Council. On Friday, however, President Babrak Karmal of Afghanistan rejected the Giscard proposal, denouncing "any attempt to internationalize the Afghan question." The Soviet Union, which has put 85,000 troops into Afghanistan, supports direct bilateral talks beween the Karmal government and Afghanistan's neighbors, an idea rejected by Pakistan.

Broader Preoccupation

Mr. Giscard d'Estaing's proposal on Afghanistan appears to be part of a much broader preoccupa-tion be has with the troubled state of East-West relations and the outlook he has for the coming months. It is an outlook marked by the fact that when he speaks of the period of detente, he uses the

The French president, who regu-larly receives long letters from Mr. Brezhnev, senses that the Soviet leadership was in some ways relieved to see an end to four erratic years under Mr. Carter and was ready to define a new relationship

Libya: The Outlaw State

It's irritating to find that Libya has sneaked around the U.S. embargo and bought a transport plane. But that's the least of Col. Moamer Qadhafi's offenses. In 11 vears of power he has harnessed Libva's oil billions to his peculiar Islamic precepts and fomented coups, revolutions, separatist movements and terrorism in dozens of countries around the world.

His latest move is to invade neighboring Chad, whose uranium-rich northern tier he annexed five years ago. Thus has he carried off the first victory of his Soviet-supplied arms and put himself in a position to extend his troublemaking in Africa.

Ideally, France, still the leading outside patron of formerly French West Africa. would have challenged Libya's "Islamic legions" in Chad. But France had harkened to an African call to permit an "African solution" to Chad's long, ragged civil war, and had withdrawn its troops last year. The legal government then invited Col. Qadhafi in.

There was also the matter of a new contract signed with Libya by the French state oil company. Since then, the French have condemned Libya, bolstered their forces in the region and suspended the new contract. African states have demanded Libya's withdrawal from Chad. But Libva's menace remains real.

The scope of Col. Qadhafi's outlawry is matched only by the scope of other nations' tolerance of it. More than the weight of oil and Soviet patronage is involved. Col.

Oadhafi has cleverly exploited his place in Arab, Islamic, "anti-imperialist" and anti-Zionist ranks. So bold and unlikely is his policy - like Hitler's - that people have trouble grasping the whole and the purpose of it.

The immediate issue is Chad. The predominantly black and Christian population in the South is not under Libya's thumb and deserves to be sustained by traditional friends in the region, while a close eye is kept on the more fluid politics of the Libyan-controlled Moslem North African efforts to sponsor elections offering citizens of Chad the choice of living under Libya or not should be encouraged.

In the Carter years the impression spread - certainly it did in Egypt, a bitter rival of Col. Qadhafi's - that for all of its depredations Libva enjoyed a certain official indulgence in the United States. The Reagan administration, determined to be tougher on international terrorism and on states that act as Soviet pawns, appears ready to remove that impression.

But what judgment must Col. Qadhafi make about U.S. seriousness as he notes that through the 1970s, while virtually all the U.S. allies reduced and in some cases (France) terminated their imports of Libyan oil, the United States tripled its imports? The largest single part, about a third, of the $20-billionplus that Col. Qadhafi acquired last year to finance his dreams of Islamic glory, and his acts of aggression and terror, came from the United States.

THE WASHINGTON POST.

The Gulf in the Gulf Command

The most vital step in any military operation is to appoint a commander to run it. But in preparing to defend Gulf oil, the Carter administration did this old adage four better: it gave control of the new Rapid Deployment Force to five different military authorities. The force's command structure has been described by one of its highest officers as "a nightmare." And that's in peacetime.

It is hardly surprising that the four U.S. armed services competed for control of a large integrated force whose readiness is being given even higher priority than that of the combat units of NATO. But that does not excuse a deadlock that has stalled orderly command arrangements since August.

That is when it was decided to change the focus of the force from preparing for limited action anywhere to the defense of Southwest Asia against a heavy Soviet attack. Accordingly, the force and its Marine commander, Lt. Gen. P.X. Kelley, should have been removed from peacetime control by the Armydirected Readiness Command in the United States and assigned to the people who will control it in wartime. The available choices have been an independent theater command directly under the Joint Chiefs, or a subheadquarters of either the European Command in Stuttgart or the Pacific Command in

A new theater may ultimately be useful for a command that may one day field a force of seven or eight divisions. One Marine division and four Army divisions are already designated for it. But there is now no suitable place in the Middle East to base a theater headquarters, much less its divisions. And all the chiefs agree on using existing command structures instead of duplicating them.

A staff study for the chiefs has proposed a sensible solution: vesting control of the Rapid Deployment Force in the European Command, with only its naval support and one Marine division controlled from Hawaii. This has now been accepted by Gen. Kelley and the chiefs, except for the Marine Corps commandant, who counts on the support of some key senators.

The logic of the proposal is inescapable. The European Command is headed by Gen. Bernard Rogers, NATO's supreme commander. The defense of Europe's oil would thus be put in the same hands as the defense of Europe. Moreover, the Rapid Deployment Force needs NATO ports and airfields to reach the Gulf. And because it would divert supplies and troops from the European theater, its creation should go hand in hand with efforts to persuade Europeans to fill the gap and to contribute to the Gulf effort.

All major considerations point in a single direction: a European command for what will really be a Middle East force. The Pentagon should get on with it.

International Opinion

Example and Warning

The strong wind of liberal conviction blows through the economic program of the new American president. Mr. Reagan and his team trust in the strength of a free economy. the dynamic of entrepreneurial initiative. Not state programs conceived by bureaucrats but entrepreneurial initiative is supposed to lend the American economy the stature that corresponds to the country's political power.

The president will be successful with his initially unpopular measures only if he wins the trust of broad sections of the public. Especially his budget policy is bold and by no means assured of success. This program makes the attempt to refloat by means of a liberal policy an economy already sloshing through boggy terrain.

It is under this aspect that other countries, in particular the Federal Republic, will look at America. There, the impression is growing that the remarkable strengthening of the dollar already reflects the trust that other countries, too, put in the new administration. So, just as the British prime minister applies liberal policy to save her country, now America takes after her. For the Federal Republic and for Europe, these are not only Platonic examples. Economic powers are perhaps growing here that give notice of a new status in international competition. Mr. Reagan's policy is consequently an example and also a warning to those here at home who want to go up against economic calamities always with the same prescriptions based on government ac-

- From Frankfurter Allgemeine Zeitung.

Unpleasant Imitative Effects

Within the United States, the expenditure cuts include blatant reductions in help for the poor, which run counter to the ethic of the Great Society that American governments strove toward in past years. This in itself, from the world's leading democracy, is likely to have unpleasant imitative effects elsewhere in the world ...

Implications for the developing countries are even more disturbing. Mr. Reagan's budget director, David Stockman, has found easy targets for cuts in aid programs, and there are disturbing plans for running down American commitments to such multilateral agencies as the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank. Such institutions are an important source of stability and assistance in a shaky world economic order. - From The Observer (London).

Dash for Growth

Some of the details of the Reagan-Stockman package have been shrewdly and imaginatively conceived ... The fact remains, however, that this is a very high-risk strategy, with few solid guarantees even if Congress lets it through intact. It is a dash-for-growth plan, launched while prices are still rising at 12 percent a year.

The diplomat, a Minister Plenipotentiary, said: "When the delegates met, they found a very formidable menu placed before them. As they looked down it they were struck with the extreme danger to the diplomatic digestion of three, at least, of the more serious dishes. So, desirous of putting off the worst to last, they began with the dessert." "Rather an indigestible way of taking a meal!" chimed in a colleague, slowly polishing up the monocle that appears to he the trademark of the Diplomatic Corps.

WASHINGTON -- Congressional resentment at the theoretically dry report of the national law enforcement commission gained strength today when data assembled revealed several significant facts, including discouragement over Prohibition among its chief enforcers. "Prohibition cannot prohibit," was the opinion expressed by Amos W. Woodcock, chief of dry agents, in his testimony before the commission. Among other details was a statement by Mabel Walker Willebrandt, former assistant attorney-general for Prohibition, that one section of the Volstead Act reflected the desire of Congress to "lift the heavy hand of the Volstead Act from interfering with family habits so far as possible."

Series of Events

The article covers a series of events beginning with the hostage-taking and the Soviet in-vasion of Afghanistan, both at the end of 1979, through the reversed UN vote on Israeli settlements on the West Bank, Fidel Castro's unleashing of Cuban refugees, the failed rescue attempt in Iran and related resignation of Secretary of State Cyrus Vance. It was clear without the evidence of public opinion surveys that each of these events would cost Mr. Carter votes, whether he was responsible for them or not. Retrospectively, the polls tell as just how badly they hurt him.

As 1980 began, polls indicated that 42 percent of Americans considered foreign policy

CROSSCURRENTS

"the most important problem facing the country today." Seven months earlier, before the hostages were taken and before the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, the figure was a minuscule 3 percent. At the same time, "Americans who feel that the country is in deep and se-rious trouble' reached an unprecedented 84 percent in 1980."

Mr. Yankelovich and Mr. Kaagan weave concern about economic problems into their article, but the focus is on the public's perception of national security and the U.S. role in the world. They contend that the angry public response to Afghanisan in particular, is the result of "a coalescence of anxieties" and that it would be a mistake to conclude that a few months of quiet will dissipate it.

They argue that the electorate has given Mr.

Reagan a clear mandate to be tough, to use U.S. force to aid allies and to restore U.S. honor in the world. But they also point out that the United States is less well equipped to carry out that mandate than it was in the early

They conclude by warning that if Mr. Reagan's policies should fail to bring things under control, the result is less likely to be a

than a swing "toward the strongly ideological right, with its villains, scapegoats and calls for righteous authoritarianism

Unfortunately, there is less hard evidence for that thesis than for the spillover of frustration that contributed so heavily to Mr. Reagan's triumph in November.

Polls are weakest at prediction, especially in a volatile situation, because they are only the measure of opinion at a given moment. So when they suggest what U.S. voters will do next time. Mr. Yankelovich and Mr. Kaagan are venturing into conjecture They recognize that it will be difficult for the president to shape a consensus behind subtle, nuanced policies — it always is — and that the United States is "no longer the world's preeminent locus of military and economic pow-er." They also give the U.S. public credit for being more consistent in its foreign policy views than policymakers.

But they evidently do not believe that in their stored-up frustration and anger U.S. voters will grasp the occasional need to try achiev-ing by diplomacy what cannot be accom-plished by force.

They could be right. But they seem to have reached their conclusion on the basis of a slowly building feeling that U.S. pride has been wounded and that Americans find that intolerable. Another possible conclusion is that, always pragmatic, Americans are simply looking for something that will work. I don't mean to suggest that the electorate is likely to shift from its current hawkishness to a posture of appeasement. But in 1984 a centrist Democrat like John Glenn could prove a lot more attractive than a conservative Republican like Jesse Helms. That, of course, is also

Brezhnev's Gratitude and the Soviet Fate

Brezhnev said during ceremonies marking his 74th birthday last De-cember. It was an indication of his very good sense.

When Mr. Brezhnev came to power in 1964, Mao ruled in Peking and Lyndon Johnson was U.S. president. They are both dead and their successors have already been replaced. And still, Mr. Brezhnev, the oldest leader of the Soviet state ever, has no intention of abandoning his post.

Just a year ago, he appeared on the edge of collapse, completely worn down by an undisclosed illness. He has since fully recovered and strengthened his hold on the reigns of power that seemed to be slipping away from him at the Monday, Mr. Brezhnev is to open the 26th Soviet Communist Party congress for the fourth time as leader of the Soviet Union and he has every reason to be grateful for his fate. Yet, the 265 million Soviet citizens should also be asked if they have any reason to be grateful for their fate.

The 6,000 delegates to the party congress will unquestionably manifest their enthusiastic and unanimous approval of the circumstances that have put and kept Mr. Brezhnev on top in the Kremlin.

The Brezhnev system dislikes surprise and the congress will be in the image of its leader. There will be no terror and no preliminary extermination of rivals as just before the 18th congress under Stalin, no extraordinary and brutal declarations such as Nikita Khrushchev's "secret report" during the 20th congress in 1956 and no utopic slogans like the one launched during the 22d congress of 1961 about catching up with and passing the capitalist system by 1970.

Yet, behind the pompous front of monolithic unity and the declarations of unanimous approbation, there will be the specter of the most disappointing balance sheet ever presented by a Soviet leader and of the most dangerous risks undertaken by the Soviet Union in decades.

For the first time since World War II, Moscow now can legiti-mately complain about encircle-ment. But the encirclement is the work of Communists, not capitalists. It is the result of the contra-dictions of the Soviet system and not the object of an imperialist

In the East, China, the biggest Communist state, openly declares that there is nothing Socialist in the Soviet empire. In the South, the Afghanistan adventure has made very clear the real goals of BRUSSELS —"I am very grate-the Communist superpower. In the ful for my fate," Leonid I. West, Poland has already negated the fundamental dogma that the Soviet system elaborated with great difficulty 64 years ago. The Soviet Union has never been so isolated in postwar times as now. The invasion of Afghanistan, a nonaligned country, has severely shaken its position in the Third World, while the Soviet threat of force against Poland has led to a crisis in Moscow's relations with the West and to confusion within the East Bloc.

The election of President Reagan and his show of determination to react to Communist moves on any continent were of no help to Mr. Brezhnev. In other words, the Soviet leader's main international objectives, to create a detente that would be beneficial to the Soviet Union and to sign the SALT-2 accords, are now things of the past.

Further proof of this new simation is Washington's indication that it will continue the grain embargo, showing that linkage is now operational in U.S.-Soviet rela-

The grain embargo is an important factor in Soviet economic stagnation and Mr. Brezhnev will have to tell the party congress about the failure of the Soviet economy. Most of the main goals of the last five-year plan, 1976-1980, have not been met. The 11th plan, to be launched at the congress, will have the least ambitious goals of any since the war. Yet even these goals can be considered illusory. Scarcity is now endemic in the Soviet Union. The world's second greatest economic power and biggest producer of energy has shown itself unable to offer its people a decent standard of living

Soviet experts have warned that the regime today is threatened more by a state of lethargy, by the stagnation and apathy of its population, than by its real internal enemies or those throughout the

The real Soviet problem is not one of a good system inefficiently applied by incompetent bureaucrats, but the system itself. No repression, no censorship can erase the evidence of three basic fact about Soviet life.

First, the Soviet system of management is an overall failure and the Soviet model is in no way an attractive one. After 35 years of violent agitation, Poland has rejected it completely. And for the first time in 60 years, the heads of the three biggest Communist parties in the West have decided not to attend the congress of Lenin's party. The second evident fact is that ideology no longer exists. The first Communist state has no grand ideal to offer. The latest armed conflicts opposed not Communist and capitalist states, but the Soviet Un-ion and Afghanistan, China and Vietnam and Cambodia Long gone is the concept that Communists states never would make war against each other.

The only remaining vehicle for the Soviet ideal is Moscow's mili-tary power — the third basic fact. Arms are the only field in which "real Communism" is capable of keeping its promises or of backing up its threats. It is Moscow's only calling card, the only explanation for its role on the international selves as supply-siders also are looking for a large drop in inflation by next year. They say Mr. Reagan's proposed tax and spend-ing cuts, along with restraint at the Fed, would quickly lower actual inflation rates as expectations of inflation are reduced. That effect would almost immediately be reinforced, they claim, by such supply-side effects as higher levels of business investment and more rapid productivity gains, which would help cut infletion further.

Less Sanguine

More eclectic economists generally are less sanguine. They also incorporate likely Fed actions in their assessments, but stress that tight money and other factors will have contributed by the end of 1982 to three successive years in which the U.S. unemployment rate has been above 7 percent. That much slack in labor markets, and the concomitant idle factory capacity, will restrain wage demands and the ability of producers to raise the prices of the goods they sell. Otto Eckstein of Data Resources Inc. is in this group, "Inflation stands a good chance of significant improvement," he said. "In-stant oil decontrol has front-loaded the inflation process of the president's term; and the coormity of the 1979-80 OPEC increase gives President Reagan a good chance of avoiding the third round of OPEC trouble during his first term.

"While a limited wage acceleration still "While a limited wage acceleration still lies ahead with only small productivity offsets, and industrial prices are likely to stage a round of catch-up increases, the dollar will be aided by high interest rates, monetary restraint and conservative policies," he said. "As a result, there is a pretty good prospect for a reduction of the inflation rate from the inherited 12 percent to single-digit figures." single-digit figures."

But Mr. Eckstein's best guess for consum-er price inflation in 1982 and 1983 is 9.6 percent, only narrowly below double digits.

The Reagan administration, in a compromise between some of its supply-side economists and those using more conventional an-alytical techniques, projected that inflation — as measured by the gross national product deflator — would drop from 9.8 percent in 1980 to 9.5 percent this year and 7.7 percent in 1982. Because of an assumed drop in interest rates, including home mortgage rates, the decline in consumer price inflation would be even greater. The consumer price index, up 12.4 percent last year, is forecast to go up 10.5 percent in 1981 and 7.2 percent in 1982.

However, various administration spokesmen last week stressed in appearances on Capitol Hill that they regarded their estimates as conservative.

Some monetarist economists, such as Robert Weintraub of the congressional Joint Economic Committee, agree. They think the anti-inflation payoff from slower money growth will be much more dramatic than the lministration predicts.

On the other hand, Alan Greenspan, for-mer chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, who has had a significant role in developing the administration's economic plan, is not quite so optimistic about 1982 as the Reagan economists. Last week he pre-dicted that the GNP deflator would rise 9.3 percent this year and 8.3 percent in 1982. Mr. Greenspan believes inflationary expectations will indeed fall as Congress ap-proves many of Mr. Reagan's proposals and the Fed slows money growth. But much of the improvement in inflation in 1982, in his view, will be the result of the combination of

The reduction of U.S. shipments has evidently upset Moscow's cal-culations and forced it to turn to Argentina, Australia and Canada for grain. President Reagan, who said during his campaign that he would lift the embargo, is now re-ported to be concerned that doing so without some type of quid pro quo from the Russians might be taken as a sign of weakness.

Uneven Performance

Farming has traditionally been a less consistent sector of the Soviet economy than industry, and its un-even performance has been attributed to a wide variety of causes, ranging from unfavorable climate to poor management and lack of incentive. In the wake of the U.S. export cuts, the Russians are expected to redouble their efforts to reduce the sharp year-to-year fluctuations in grain crops.

The energy problem, which became more and more apparent in the second half of the 1970s, derives from a variety of factors. Annual growth in oil output has become smaller as drilling teams

The convertible is for a Japanes retailer Kotobukiya Co. Ltd., whose stock is traded on the Osaka exchange. The company is offering $25 million of 15-year bonds carrying an expected coupon of 7% per-cent. The price to convert into stock is expected to be set at a premium of 5 percent over the sixday average before the final terms are fixed. In addition, investors will be given a "put" option to redeem the bonds after the fifth year at a premium of about 124 percent. If exercised, this would give investors an effective yield of 11 percent.

Depressed Secondary Market

Overall, prices in the secondary market remained depressed. On-tario Hydro's $100 million of 10year notes carrying a coupon of 13½ percent and issued at par endand the IBM 121/2s of 1988 were veloping countries to sustain even modest rates of development. For the middle-income countries, increased flows of loans on commercial terms but repayable over longer periods would be urgently needed, it said.

The survey also predicted that high prices of food grains would prevail because of an expected shortage in world production. Therefore, developing countries, most of which were dependent on food imports, would have to lace higher costs.

The report said inflation hit many developing countries during 1979-80 because of the sharp rise in oil prices and expansionary monetary and fiscal policies. OPEC Talks Seen as Start of Move Toward Output Cut

By Douglas Martin

New York Times Service NEW YORK — Last week's secret meeting of six OPEC oil ministers in Geneva has resulted in a move toward cutting back oil production to keep prices up in the face of growing symplies and week face of growing supplies and weak demand, oil industry sources said. As a result of the meeting, which began Thursday and lasted a day and a half, Saudi Arabia indicated that it intended to cut production by 2 million barrels a day, to about 8.3 million, according to Harry Neustein, a crude oil trader who said he had talked by telephone with OPEC officials Friday.

Other OPEC nations are said to have expressed willingness to cut production by a total of about 500,000 barrels daily, he said.

In addition, U.S. and European was ready to raise the price of its price. Furthermore, few of the basic grade of crude oil to $34 a barrel from $32.

Furthermore, few of the serve as a basis for a broader distance production cussion next month.

Industry analysts and company officials said production cutbacks of about the magnitude described had been expected for several

OPEC spokesmen at the organization's headquarters in Vienna denied knowledge of the meeting, but sources in Geneva said it had been held at the Intercontinental Hotel there. Such unofficial gatherings of OPEC members are not unusual, analysts noted.

Any cutbacks would traditional-be decided by individual OPEC nations, not collectively. Though consensus is sought on prices, OPEC members have chosen in the past not to make joint decisions on production to secure a desired nothing had been firmly decided at the meeting of six of the 13 OPEC members, according to Platt's Oil-Attending were ministers from Saudi Arabia, Venezuela, Nigeria, Algeria. Kuwait and Indonesia.

Analysis said any definitive policy decisions would require the approval of all 13 countries. Platt's said the six countries voted to seek a full meeting of OPEC in March, two months ahead of schedule. This led some analysts to speculate that the six made some preliminary agree-ments on production that could

The Saudis, whose current estimated production of 10.3 million barrels a day is more than one-third of OPEC's exports, have always resisted any outside intrusions on their production decisions. Their reported willingness to adjust production to the needs of

In return, analysts suggest, the kingdom may press for a unified pricing pattern. Its reported agreement to increase prices $2 a bar-rel to $34, is also seen as a step in this direction. For several years, Saudi Arabia has kept its prices consistently below those charged by other OPEC nations. Current official base prices, including a variety of differentials based on quality and transport costs, range from $32 to $41 a barrel. A sagging world oil market is also responsible for any cutbacks that might be decided upon. For example, the price of Arabian light crude, Saudi Arabia's standard variety, has fallen to about $36.50 on the spot market from $40 last September. Some OPEC producers are concerned that continuing current production levels, particularly in the face of increasing supplies from Iran and Iraq and a recession-induced decline in demand. will erode prices.

U.S. Inflation Likely to Slow in Any Case workers' contract also is up next year, and that industry, too, is suf-fering.

faster productivity growth.

Rudy Penner of the American Enterprise Institute, chief economist for the Office of Management and Budget in the Ford adminis-tration, is fully in sympathy with what the administration is trying to accomplish, but cautions, They could have a much rockier road out there than they expect."

Mr. Penner expects inflation to be lower, but not by much anytime soon. Achieving substantial reductions in inflation, even if Mr. Reagan's program is passed by Congress, could take years, in his opinion. In particular, Mr. Penner fears that the Fed's tough monetary stance will squeeze real eco-nomic activity instead of inflation. "Any realist would say it will be real growth that will give, not in-flation," he said. And getting inflation down "could mean unemploy ment hanging in the 7 percent to 8 percent range for quite a while."

Slack in Labor

Even the administration's economic scenario has unemployment still at 7 percent at the end of next year. Such slack in labor markets could help slow the rise in wages, particularly in some key industries, if the administration avoids put-ting a "floor" under pay by giving in to demands for protection from foreign competition, said Marvin Kosters, another economist with the American Enterprise Institute. Mr. Kosters said that wages in the steel and auto industries have gotten far out of line with average wages in manufacturing, and that workers in those industries have lost jobs as a result. "The administration ought to be fostering needed adjustments, not providing protection from foreign competition, he said. In the case of Chrysler, such an adjustment in the form of a wage freeze has been accepted by the United Auto Workers.

So far, the administration has done nothing to discontinue the "trigger price" program set up by former President Jimmy Carter to limit imports of low-cost foreign steel. And it has neither opposed nor supported proposals to limit auto imports, particularly from Ja-

The plan involved breaking up UA-Columbia, which would have been unacceptable to the joint offer to acquire UA-Colum-bia Cablevision, the country's 10th biggest cable television company. for $237.6 million in cash. The proposal represents the second largest cash offer for a cable operator, eclipsed only by Westinghouse's $646-million agreement to acquire Teleprompter, the nation's biggest cable operation. However, cable analysts speculated that the price, which works out to $72 a share, might not satisfy UA-Columbia shareholders.

The development announced Friday, further underscores the growing appetite of major corporations for independent cable companies. It represents a logical move for both Dow Jones, which publ-ishes The Wall Street Journal, and Knight-Ridder, one of the country's biggest newspaper chains.

Robert M. Rosencrans, UA-Col-umbia's president, said, "I had not anticipated the offer, though I knew both companies were interested in us for some months." He declined to predict whether the proposal, to be presented to the board March 4, would be accept-

When you're the 384th foreign bank to open in London you better have something the other 383 don't.

Options

But before we tell you what it is we'd better tell you what the BFCE is.

Banque Française du Commerce Extérieur is a French commercial bank—with a-French name—to which the French Government has assigned substantial mediumand long-term export credit responsibilities and for several decades now we've specialized, as our name suggests, in overseas trade.

But as you can see we haven't exactly knocked ourselves out getting ourselves overseas. While we've always crisscrossed the globe indefatigably for our customers we waited to set up shop abroad until we were ready.

We looked before we leapt. We stayed home doing our bit—a not inconsiderable bit—for the French export trade, in the process building up a solid fund of experience and expertise in international trade and commodity trading—and acquiring a good working relationship with nearly every country in the world.

Although we've been busy setting up representative and trade promotion offices since the early seventies in a number of countries—more than 20 so far—it was only in February, 1977, that we really started exporting the BFCE with the opening in New York of our first overseas branch. (Quickly followed by a loan production office in Houston, an agency in San Francisco and a branch in Milan.)

Last but not least. But the big news, of course, is London—our new City branch just around the corner from the Bank of England on Threadneedle Street.

Now we've finally arrived we'd like to unzip our bags and produce without further ado what marketing men would call our unique selling proposition.

The BFCE is a "small" bank—in the same sense Mont Blanc is a small mountain—operating in one narrow field of specialization. Overseas trade. For you there are three big advantages in this.

It means every single individual customer is very important to us and we'd better make dam sure we're doing a good job.

It means we're experts at being fast and flexible.

And it means we are able to supply you with an exceptional degree of technical and legal know-how along with an exceptional level of competence in the highly specialized area of the international transfer of funds.

We've got the wherewithal. Although we don't have branches all the way from Timbuktu to Kamchatka we are in a position to help with the financing of even the largest projects. (At the end of 1980 the Bank's total assets amounted to £13,700,000,000 with over 90 percent of our business in international trade.)

In fact, at Banque Française du Commerce Extérieur, when it comes to solving your problems, you'll find we've got what it takes.

Hurler Richard Works Out at Astros' Camp The Associated Press

COCOA, Fla. — Houston Astro pitcher J.R. Richard, recovering from last summer's lifethreatening stroke, surprised team officials Saturday by put-ting himself through a strenu-ous 2½-hour workout at the team's spring training camp.
"He really amazed all of us," said a team spokesman. "We had just planned a picture ses-sion out on the field and then he was going inside for his reg-ular rehabilitation work. "But it was such a nice day he went outside and worked a good 21/2 hours. He ran a mile and took some ground balls. If you didn't know he'd suffered a stroke, you wouldn't have known anything had been wrong."

Richard, who collapsed during a workout in the Astrodome
July 30, has not put a time schedule on his comeback atschedule on his comeback attempt. "It is just a matter of time, I don't know how much, before I pitch again," he said. "I am not totally where I was a year ago, but actually my arm is ahead of the rest of my body."

Inmate Used Hospital Print Shop To Publish 'How-To' Bomb Book

The Associated Press

WAUPUN, Wis. — An inmate of a mental institution here, using the hospital's print shop, has published a 22-page "how-to" booklet of bombs and poisons.

The "Mad Man's Book of Formulas" was written by Jim Mul-taler, described in the preface as an "ex-counterfeiter presently serving time in a Wisconsin state mental institution."

James Powell, director of Central State Hospital, said it appeared that the bulk of the printing was done through an out-side job printer, and that the work done in the print shop, apparently in 1976 or 1977, was unauthorized He said that the hospital administrators were unaware of the publi-

Ivory Coast Cancels Plan to Lower Wages

ABIDJAN - The Ivory Coast government bowed to mounting pressure Sunday and abandoned plans to cut the pay of all 30,000 state employees by an average of 60 percent.

The decision came after most of the state sector of the economy was hit by work slowdowns and strikes, in defiance of a govern-ment ban. Anonymous leaflets in circulation called for an indefinite general strike until the government renounced its policy of drastic pay cation until someone noticed a magazine advertisement for its

The $9.95 booklet offers to show how to make deadly solutions with "readily obtainable items," how to make explosives with garden ferti-lizer and how to make laughing gas, plastic explosives and napalm. It was not certain how Mr. Mul-taler got supplies into the hospital and copies out of it, but the book preface expresses thanks to his wife, who reportedly lived in Milwaukee.

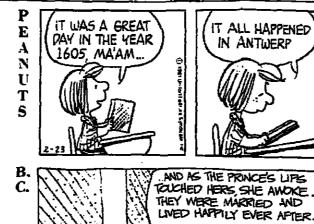

Mr. Powell said there are no restrictions on inmates publishing books, but there are restrictions on inmates having publishing materials in the institution, and hospital copies have been confiscated.
Officials said no action was taken against the author after the print shop activity was discovered.

AMERICAN TONGUE AND CHEEK

A Populist Guide to Our Language

By Jim Quinn. Pantheon. 219 pp. $11.95.

Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haupt

JIM QUINN, a poet who writes live-ly food columns for Philadelphia Magazine and The SoHo Weekly News, has been browsing through old language books, among them Otto-Jespersen's "A Modern English Grammar on Historical Principles" (1909, 1931; revised edition, 1947), considered the best scholarly grammar of our language"; Thomas R. Lounsbury's "The Standard of Usage in English" (1908), a surprisingly modern discussion of language "the dean of American grammar in his day": and the Oxford English Dic-tionary, that "monumental work of scholarship that defines words according to historical principles — by giv-ing examples of how the words were actually used in the literature of our language."

By undertaking this exercise, Quinn has discovered something interesting. It seems that for hundreds of years some of the best writers in the English language have been writing the kind of sentences that contemporary language-watchers like Edwin Newman, John Simon, the late Theodore M. Bernstein, and William Safire have earned their daily bread by condemn-

It seems that Shakespeare wrote "All debts are cleared between you and I" ("The Merchant of Venice"). That Oscar Wilde wrote "Experience is the name everyone gives to their mistakes" ("Lady Windermere's Fan"). That Coleridge wrote "Neither the morning nor the evening star are so fair" ("Biographia Literaria"). That Addison, Steele, Defoe, Richardson, Goldsmith, Coleridge, Southey and De Quincey wrote "different than." That Charles Darwin wrote "Unfortunately, few have observed like you have done" ("Life and Letters"). And that Kipling wrote "Talking of war, there'll be trouble in the Balkans this spring" ("The Light That Failed").

Moreover, in every case, the writer was correct, if we are to believe the rules laid down in the distinguished Oxford English Dictionary. In short, says Quinn, it's all right to use "all the words and phrases and sentences you have been trying to stamp out: Final-ize. Hopefully. Between you and I. You know? Giftable. Winston tastes good — like a cigarette should. There's two of you. Anybody can do what they want. Different than. Dangling participles. Just about everything you've heard was illiterate, barbarous, illogical and a threat to the future of English." These discoveries, and others in a similar vein, enable Quinn to do several things in this outrageous and delightful study. First, he has a wonderfully witty time zapping the languagewatchers, or the "pop grammarians," as he calls them, for trying to stop the natural development of language, and for not knowing the true history of the words they are attacking and defend-ing. (For a typical example, to Edwin Newman's complaint about Ron Ziegler's presumed introduction of the words "nonperformance" and "inthat the former was initiated by policy of allowing the harvest to Shakespeare in 1609 and the latter main in the hands of the farmes.

THERE is no one around who plays with the smoothness of the world champion, Anatoly Karpov. His rivals may agonize over their moves — every tournament room has its share of furrowed brows - but the 29-year-old Russian makes his game look easy.

Williams fed prop Graham Price, who scampered 20 Graham Price, who scampered meters before he was engulfed in an advancing mani. The ball came out slickly for Williams, who passed to Pearce. An attack was on — but Pearce stopped on his right foot, straight in front of the posts 30 meters out, and drop-kicked the winning goal with his left foot. When the pandemonium had died down a bit, a fan (probably from Bridgend, where Pearce plays his club rugby) was heard to exult: "That guy has never kicked a left-footed drop even in his dreams."

So Ireland scored the only tries of the match but Wales won. Ward and Campbell, regarded as two of the best placekickers in world rugby, missed five kicks (two conver soons and three penalties — a total of 13 possible points — any one of which could have reversed the outcome). The Welsh have now scored just one try, against England, in their last four games.

On to Paris

A mood of relief and revived confidence had Welsh officials still smiling Sunday despite their morn-ing-after pains. "The fowards got it right and the new backs can only get better," one of them said, "We'll be going for the champion-ship in Paris."

And the unbeaten home streak will be 13 years and 11 months old when France come to Cardiff next Feb. 6. That is longer by a few weeks than the unbeaten home streak of the first Wesh golden era from March, 1899, to January, 1913. NEW YORK -- Of all dull words of tongue or pen. the dullest are these: "Bjorn Borg easily defeated John McEnroe today in the first match of their $1.15million three-match series."

It isn't the tennis that's boring, although when McEnroe or Jimmy Connors or Ilie Nastase puts on one of those infantile tantrums it can make the spectator's teeth ache with ennui and impatience. Rather, it's the money that palls - the weary, stale, flat, unprofitable repetition of sums that used to be unmentionable this side of the Chase Manhattan.

Rutabaga Tale

This week it's three matches for $1.15 million, next week the $250,000 Turnip Festival tournament and so on and on, week after week around the year.

Money is all right in its place but it has become such a drug on the tennis market that promoters have to offer other inducements to rekindle the competitive spark among the players. ing May 3. This is preceded by tournaments in Mon-terrey, Mexico; Philadelphia; Richmond, Va.; Brussels, Rotterdam, Milan, Frankfurt and Houston, with points awarded, in addition to money, according to a player's standing in each event. The eight top point-scorers go to Dallas, and the one accumulating the most points gets (a) more mon-ey, (b) a gold tennis ball trophy valued at $10,000 and (c) first choice of 15 special prizes worth at least $20,000 each. The player with the second-highest point total will then pick a prize from the 14 remaining, the third man will have his choice of 13, and so on down to No. 8, who will find eight prizes unclaimed. He'll probably settle for a booby prize like tax-free bonds.

SAN DIEGO - Eamonn Coghlan, crossing up his competi-tion with a switch in strategy, has shattered the world record indoor mile record for the second time in Trailing America's Steve Scott with two laps to go Friday night in the Jack-in-the-Box Invitational track meet, Coghlan uncorked an early kick on the way to a stunning 3:50.6 performance. It smashed his old mark by two full seconds.

"With two laps to go. I decided I was going to make my move for the tape because Steve in the last few races was expecting me to go the last lap or lap and a half," said Coghlan. "I figured going with two laps would catch him by surprise."

The surprise produced the sixth fastest mile of all time. Only four other milers in history have run faster. The five fastest indoor milers of all time were in the field. "Once he gets ahead at that stage, it's over," said Scott, whose second place time of 3:51.6 was a second faster than Coghlan's old record, also set in San Diego. Rabbit Credited Coghlan, an also-ran in two Olympics but a sensation on the U.S. indoor circuit, gave credit to Phil Kane, who agreed to serve as a "rabbit." Setting a searing pace, Kane helped put the field in position for a record.

"Kane made the race," said Coghlan. "He did a great job with the pace." Kane sped to a blister-ing 1:54 half-mile.

By his own account, Coghlan

Francie Larrieu set a world-best indoor time of 5 minutes, 55.2 seconds as she won the 2,000-meter race at the Edmonton Journal Indoor Games Saturday night. The previous best time was Debbie Pearson's 6:04.8.

Larrieu ran tight on the heels of Debbie Scott through the first 1,700 meters, but took the lead on the back straight with about 300 meters left and widened the margin to the wire. Scott finished sec-ond in 5:59.9, with Sheila Currie third in 6:03.3.

As if the war of snubs and public insults between the camps were not enough, the Sox predicament was redoubled by the fact that Yankee owner George Steinbrenner felt no computation to play hardball as if it were softball. He bought Boston's Luis Tiant and Bob Watson at far above their true market values as much to embarprove his Yanks. Quickly, the new ownership was seen as bumbling and inept. Not only were player-management relations a war zone, but fan-management affections turned to hostility. The Sox, a moody, cliquish, fundementally carcless team even in their 99-win glory days of '78, were ripe for the reaper. In '79, they collapsed in September to finish 11½ games behind Baltimore. In 1980, the pitching-poor club was 19 games behind the Yankees.

Rinsing Out the Sox Normally, such a state of affairs would mean it was time to bring in the fire hose and wash out the chibhouse. Unfortunately, in this case, the four central players seen as malcontents — Burleson, Hobson, Lynn and Fisk - were, taken as a group, the most hard-nosed, talented and spirited players on a lethargic team. The Sox decided to keep the monners and back-stabbers, the overpaid free agents who hadn't produced, while getting rid of the nucleus of players who might keep the team a marginal contender for a couple of more years.

For months, New England has been beating its breast about the fates of Freddy and Carlton, those in-tandem Boston emblems of grace (Lynn) and fortitude (Fisk). Both management and players have continued the PR character that the athletes don't want to leave and management doesn't want to lose them.

dence the Sox could or would meet their market value when the time came. The infamous mail foolup that precipitated the bargain-basement trade of Lynn to California and has made Fisk a free agent has not, as Boston fans think, been a Sox problem. Rather, it has solved a Lynn is gone and Fisk soon will be. No more acute case of bad blood exists in all of baseball than that between the long-suffering, often-injured Fisk and Sullivan, the former catcher — who has implied that Fisk would not play hurt. Be hind the pose of negotiation, there is pure hostility on both sides. Mention a possible meeting with Kapstein at his home in San Diego and Sullivan says, "Why should I fly 3,000 miles to talk to him?" Red Sox broadcaster Ken Har-reison, finally fed up, exploded a few days ago and said all those things that the rest of New Eng-land has been muttering for "The club is in disarray, confused and chaotic," said the Hawk, forgetting his own self-interest, since the club could hardly be blamed for preventing a fellow with such opinions from announc-ing its games. "If they don't have the money to pay Lynn and Burle-son, they can't afford to own the ballclub... Fisk is the symbol of Red Sox baseball and the way management is treating him is be

${\bf `Haigravations'}$

By William Safire

NEW YORK — A man who uses "caveat" and "context" as verbs must be eternally vigilant-

In his first press conference at Foggy Bottom, Gen. Alexander Haig Jr. quickly reversed the flow of history by speaking of "the Christian-Judeo values" of Western civilization. These values had hitherto been called "Judeo-Christian," with the "o" a com-bining form; if Judaism is placed at the end, the phrase should be Christian-Judaic," or perhaps "Christo-Judaic."

Safire But I would stick with "Judeo-Christian" because the phrase reflects the chronology, going with the flow of Old Testament to New.

The new secretary is becoming a master of the art of the almost correct word. "I have no finite plan for my own travel." he stated. "Fimeans "with measurable boundaries"; a word he might better have used was "specific." Perhaps a current use of "finite" to mean "tangible" influenced General Haig; the possibilities are infinite, but there is a big difference between "finite" and "definite."

Vogue words are his specialty. A new vogue word — pioneered by David Stockman, the budget hawk is "hemorrhaging." Terrorism. said General Haig, was "hemorrhaging in many respects through-Redundancies abound. Those who suspected his "an additional number of augmentees" to be re-dundant were mistaken. Still, there is no defending Haig on his reck-less locution: "the most careful less locution: "the most careful caution." (The "augmentees" are people who augment the staff already on the job, and are therefore properly "augmenters." Haig compared his augies with "in-place pros," a phrase that is out-of-place

Although the Associated Press transcript of Haig's remarks read: "Let me clarify one prospect of your premised question," I think the secretary must have said, or at least meant to say, "aspect" rather than "prospect." Come to think of it, he meant to say "one premise of

It is not wholly fair to grade the grammar of anybody's spoken language, because few of us speak as carefully as we write — when we write, we get a chance to edit. But when words are deliberately used to stand meaning on its head, the speaker deserves some censure. Haig on human rights: "There will be no de-emphasis but a change in priority." If "a change in priority" is not a "de-emphasis" of what had been top priority, what is it? Be-cause of too much careful caution, his meaning is hemorrhaging.

Not all Haigravations call for criticism. When it comes to a trope, Haig is no dope: Asked about Europe, he referred to Po-land as one of a number of "watchpots." A watchpot is, presumably, a pot that bears watching to make certain that it does not boil over — a good trope that be-longs in diplomacy's hot-stove league, coined on the analogy of "crackpots." Good coinage on 'watchpot." Al - now just be certain it does not become "a watchpot situation" or "in a watchpot

A generation ago, the historian Oliver Jensen dealt with another military man's lingo in a classic parody about the Gettysburg Ad-dress as Eisenhower would have delivered it ("I haven't checked these figures, but 87 years ago, I think it was, a number of individuals organized a governmental setup . . .")

As soon as the Haigravation reached Great Britain, a parody was called for, and an editorialist for The Guardian wrote:

"Haig, in congressional hearings before his confirmatory, paradoxed his auditioners by abnormailing his responds so that verbs were nouned, nouns verbed and adjectives adverbised. He techniqued a new way to vocabulary his thoughts so as to informationally uncertain anybody listening about what he had actually implicationed.

If that is how General Haig wants to nervous breakdown the Russian leadership," concluded The Guardian, "he may be shrewding his way to the biggest diplomatic invent since Clausewitz. Unless, that is, he schizophrenes his allies first.

Bettelheim on Films, Fairy Tales

By Henry Mitchell
Washington Post Service

ASHINGTON - Bruno Bettelheim, one of the few men ever sprung from a German concentration camp, is famous as a child psychologist in the grand-est sense of the term, and for years he was professor of psychiatry at the University of Chicago, but he was a little baffled at the request to deliver the first of a yearly showcase series of lectures to the American Film Institute.

He knows nothing of films, af-ter all, and told the institute so. No matter. His declining of the honor to begin the Patricia Wise lectures did him no good. Jean Firstenberg, director of AFL, simply told him he must address the great topic of films, and at the last Bettelheim agreed.

"I got together 500 books bearing on the subject," he said in a pre-lecture chat, "and while I didn't read every word of all of them, at least I held all of them in my hand. My starting point, preparing for the lecture is why should anybody go to the mov-ies? What do they do for the "Movies do not invite reflection," he observed. He did not speak of the obvious and primary feature of movies — their flicker ing quality, and the cardinal emphasis on light and instability. Things are forever moving about.

Ambiguous Reaction

I kept feeling during his lec-ture that Bettelheim was pulling a few punches and not saying straight out that films are either trifling amusements to get you out of the rain for an hour, or else ponderous essays aiming to prove the sun rises in the east, or else propaganda. It would not surprise me that since he's spent months thinking of little else, we may see after a bit some tremendous Bettelheim analysis of what's wrong with films.

I did ask him about his reflections on "Seven Beauties" which appeared in The New Yorker, and in which he took the film up one side and down the other for what he felt was its falsity or cynicism or fraudulence or general wrongheadedness, and Bettelheim said that was another case in which he said no, he would not write about it. But he did.

That film dealt with life in a German concentration camp.

The hero was a pig before he en-tered the camp, a pig after he left, and (Bettelheim argued) his general piggishness, coarseness, sloth, greed, etc., helped him sur-"It's completely false," he said (and wrote in his criticism). "What led to survival was, obviously, the arrival of Allied troops to free the camps, not some ac-tion of the people in the camps. But within the camp, before the liberation, your chances of survival were greatly increased if you cooperated with your fellow inmates and shared with them and felt with them. If you behaved as the hero of 'Seven Beauties,' you wouldn't survive to the day of liberation."

Spent Two Years in Camps

Bettelheim was sent to Buchenwald in 1938 and was in camps almost two years. His crime was that he was a Jew and an intellectual.

His degree from the University of Vienna was in aesthetics and psychology. Even years before, he had become interested in helping autistic children, if indeed anything could be done to help. Autistic children lived in his house. The work took years and vast patience. That work in Vienna stopped abruptly with his ar-rest and two years at Dachau and Buchenwald. Bettelheim's release is generally credited to the intervention of New York Gov. Herbert Lehman and Eleanor Roosevelt with German authorities. They both were familiar with his

It has been said there's nothing like a few years in Dachau to turn you against a film such as Lina Wertmueller's "Seven Beau-ties." In any case, Bettelheim objected strongly to what he thought the film was saying; namely, that humans are bestial whether in Dachau or in liberated Naples. He could not decide whether the film was saying, "Therefore, nothing makes any difference," or whether it was saying, "Life with concentration camps is no worse than life without them," or just what. But ev-erything in him told him the film was a bad one.

One thing great art does, he said in his lecture, is to provide a myth — a shared fantasy of mankind - which tells us our place in nature and bow to live well.

Bruno Bettelheim

If movies do not do this - and he cited his own moviegoing as a boy in Vienna as a series of rather shabby escapes with or without sexual excitement then you might wonder why not. The medium, Bettelheim says, has the same potential for all-embracing mythmaking as the Athenian theater or the medieval church. But he did not push this question beyond stating it.

in his book "The Uses of En-chantment," which deals with the splendid value of fairy tales for children, he repeatedly makes several points that seem to shed light on his view of human development, if not specifically his view of movies.

Fairy tales help a child to know who he is. His fears may not be able to be put in words, but symbols in the stories can reach him and he understands them perfectly, and he learns his fears are not something to be ashamed of, that others have the same ones. He learns there are ways (when faced with a giant, say) to overcome seemingly fatal threats. He learns from these stories (without any moralizing, for moralizing might threaten him further) that he can and will go from level to level of development and that things will become increasingly better and happier. Provided he does not shirk the L'nseen unknown, benevolent powers will come to his aid if he is brave and goes on. But if he stops where he is, refusing to de-velop further, then that is dangerous indeed.

Fairy Tales Endlessly Optimistic By and large, Bettelheim insists, fairy tales are endlessly optimistic. And endlessly true. In the case of adults seeing movies, it could be argued we are no longer little children. I sus-pect, myself, that what Bettel-heim admires so much in the fairy tales is what he would admire in movies, if he could find it. Namely, the trumpet cry to master our fears and crises by developing further as men; to rec-ognize and deal increasingly effectively with our most hostile and dark aspects - not denying them but harnessing them.

Bettelheim is not a Jew in the sense of one who worships at the temple, and has not identified himself with what is sometimes called "Jewish culture." On occasion he has offended some of the Jewish community by saying en-tirely too many Jews perished under Hitler because they cared too much for their status and wealth and not enough for their dignity and independence as humans. Religious or not, it is impossi-ble (talking with or reading Bettelheim) not to be reminded of the prophets Micah and Isaiah, and the values of religion.

Distrusts 'Artsy' Films He distrusts he says, con-sciously "artsy" films, accessible "only to chies," and is fond of observing that Sophocles, Shakespeare, etc. (not that it's easy to think of many others of whom this is true) were tremendous box-office favorites as well as heroes to the intellectual establishment. He would like movies to be popular in a mass-consumption way (like his beloved fairy tales?) yet able to stand up under the strictest scrutiny as art and as the fairy tales?). "Movies should affirm the meaning of life, the meanings of the lives of quite ordinary men and women. They should affirm
